mDL Wireframe #1
Flow: Applying for a financial account.

This wireframe describes a representative user journey for a prospective customer applying to open a new financial account and using an mDL for identity proofing. What is described here is not the only way to design the flow for a user's journey. However, this is an example that can be used by financial institutions to adapt as necessary to meet the needs of their own customers and internal IT infrastructure.

Comments on the user journey can be offered at Submit Comments

A mobile Driver's License (mDL) is a digital representation of your physical driver's license that can be stored in the digital wallet of your mobile phone. They are issued by your state Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) and contain the same identifiers as your physical driver's license card (e.g., name, address, date of birth) and your picture that is on file with the DMV. If you have an mDL it will either, be stored in a DMV application or your phone's digital wallet, such as Google or Apple wallet. If you select this option your phone will automatically prompt you to present your mDL.	✕
